Bay Disposal invests $1.5 million to expand Hampton facility

Nov. 22, 2013 - Bay Disposal and Recycling is constructing a $1.5 million, 24,000 square foot addition to its recycling facility at Copeland Industrial Park. When finished, the expansion will add 32 employees to Bay Disposal's existing Hampton workforce.

The new space will include a truck maintenance building, construction debris recycling area, and parking for the company's trucks and empty containers.

Emmett Moore, president of Bay Disposal, praised Hampton's city manager's office, City Council and city staff for making the addition possible. "The city of Hampton was great to work with," Moore said.

Noting that the Hampton location is closer to Bay Disposal's Norfolk operations, Moore said, "we gain more on the efficiency than anything else. It's a great move for us."

Locally owned and operated, Bay Disposal also has offices in Powells Point, N.C. The company was incorporated in 2000 to provide area governments, businesses and others in Hampton Roads and northern North Carolina with full-service trash collection service that's flexible enough to meet their specific needs.

"The City of Hampton is pleased to have Bay Disposal Recycling expand its presence here. As with Bay Disposal Recycling, we are committed to working alongside our existing businesses to grow their presence in Hampton," said Economic Development Director Leonard Sledge.

Bay Disposal's Hampton location, Copeland Industrial Park, is just minutes from interstates 64 and 664. The park is also within a state designated Enterprise Zone, which encourages job creation and private investment.
